

Rudolf Bauer studied pharmacy and received his PhD at University of Munich, Germany; 1993 he became Associate Professor at University of Düsseldorf, Germany; 2002 he was appointed full professor of pharmacognosy at University of Graz, Austria. He acted as Head of the Institute of Pharmaceutical Sciences from 2004–2020. Since October 2024, he is Professor emeritus.

His research focused on phytochemical and pharmacological investigations of traditionally used medicinal herbs, quality control, identification of active constituents, plant metabolomics and interactions with gut microbiota.

He acted as president of the International Society of Ethnopharmacology, of the Society for Medicinal Plant and Natural Product Research (GA), and as founding president of GP-TCM Research Association.

He has published more than 430 research papers (h-index 73) and has edited several books. He received several awards, like the Qihuang International Prize of China Association of Chinese Medicine, the Outstanding International Scientist Award (Pranab Banerji Memorial Award) of Society for Ethnopharmacology India (SFE), the Varro Tyler Prize of the American Society of Pharmacognosy, the Government Friendship Award of the Peoples Republic of China, and the honorary doctorates of the universities of Helsinki/Finland and Szeged/Hungary.